

South central South Dakota has been labeled the "Pheasant Capital of the World," and for good reason! No other region compares to the wild bird numbers found in this part of the state; therefore, South Dakota's reputation for pheasant hunting is second to none.

The Springer's Buffalo Butte Ranch is located in the heart of what is known as the "Golden Triangle," an area between Gregory, Winner, and Chamberlain, at the foot of the Buffalo Buttes.

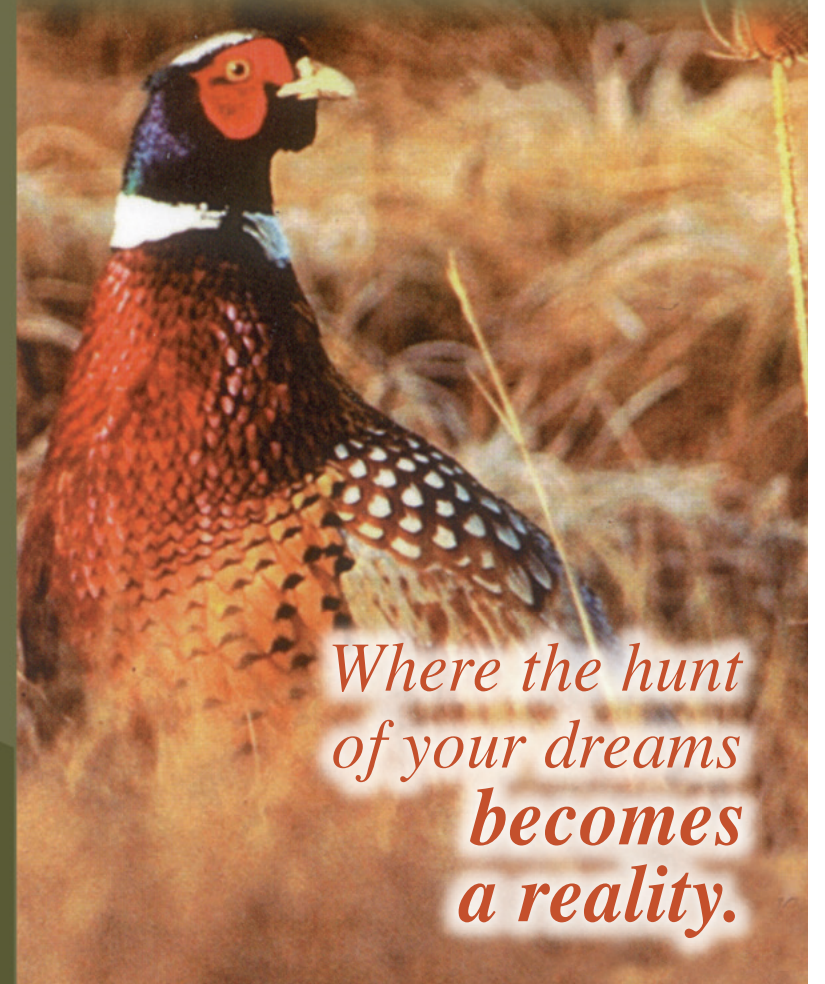

If you enjoy hunting pheasant, a world-class adventure awaits you and your hunting party on the great plains of South Dakota.

And, you'll find there's no place like the Buffalo Butte Ranch when it comes to pheasant hunting.

Where the hunt of your dreams becomes a reality.

Marshall, Colleen and family are the fourth generation on this farm, and pheasant hunting has been a growing part of each generation. The two of them have been farming this land since 1980 and have guided hunters each year since.

To make your hunting experience complete, we constructed our 4,000 sq. foot "Buffalo Butte Lodge" - first class in every aspect. The 32 x 40 great room has its own bar, big screen TV, fire place and much more. The lodge itself will accommodate 20 guest with each bedroom having its own bathroom.

We know what you really came for . . . not the scenery . . . , not the great facilities . . . , but the hunt! Our hunts are in a variety of cover, including; milo, corn, sudan grass, cattails, and tree belts along winding natural waterways and draws.

With over 6,000 acres to hunt, you will leave Buffalo Butte Ranch with many lasting memories. Between some of the most beautiful prairie landscapes and dramatic sunsets you will ever see, you will agree with many of our past clients that this is "the best kept secret" in the Midwest.

Much of the land West of the Missouri River is marginal farmland, and is not planted fence line to fence line. Because of natural terrain and conservation practices such as CRP and shelterbelts, the native pheasants flourish.

Many guests at the Buffalo Butte Ranch comment on how the field layout complements our hunts. You will quickly realize that this is the right choice for you and your friends or clients.

Memories of truly great hunts always include time spent with friends. City lights and noisy cars are replaced by silent stars and the distant howl of a coyote. You and your friends will truly relax in the tranquil setting of our lodge after a day full of exciting hunting.

The Springer family looks forward to spending time with you and your friends on one of our exclusive hunts!
